Trustees Honor Late President

University President Thomas H. Carroll died suddenly on July 27 while resting at the country home of Provost O. S. Colclough near Bluemont, Va.

Funeral services for Dr. Carroll, who had been President of the University since 1961, were held on July 29 at the First Congregational Church in Washington. Interment was in Arlington National Cemetery.

The University's Board of Trustees, at a special meeting following the funeral services, paid homage to the late President with the following resolution:

"The Board of Trustees of The George Washington University meets this 29th day of July, 1964, under sad and solemn circumstances to record the death, on July 27, of its beloved and distinguished President, Thomas Henry Carroll. During his three and one-half years as President of the University, he gave his full devotion to the task of advancing higher education in the Nation's capital. A man of wide experience in academic and world affairs, he brought to the University an enlarged view of its role in the world in which we live. In his short tenure he made a profound contribution to the University, the community, and to the welfare of his fellow man that will long be remembered. He walked where strong men walk, and his spirit of bold adventure and unlimited enthusiasm for life and for the betterment of the lot of man drew men of lesser vision to walk by his side. He was intolerant of bigotry, intolerance, and mediocrity. As a colleague of the faculty he inspired confidence in faculty and student alike, and his leadership set him apart as a leader in the cause of higher education.

"A native of California, President Carroll was educated at the University of California and Harvard University. He was faculty member and Assistant Dean of Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration at the age of 26. At 31, after having achieved the rank of Commander in the United States Naval Reserve in World War II, he was appointed Dean and full Professor in the College of Business Administration at Syracuse University. At 36 he was named Dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of North Carolina. Having served as a member of the Ford Foundation Study Committee on Program and Policy, he was asked by the Foundation to organize and direct its Program in Economic Development and Administration. Within a year he was elected a Vice President of the Foundation, and eight years later was called to the Presidency of this University.

"As President of The George Washington University his influence extended beyond the campus. He was instrumental in the formation of the consortium of universities to strengthen graduate studies in the Nation's capital and took an active interest in the educational needs of the city.

"At the University, President Carroll reaffirmed the principles of academic freedom and responsibility. He emphasized the centrality of the liberal arts

Admiral Colclough Serves Again as Acting President

John Anthony Brown, Jr., who had earlier been elected Vice President and Dean of Faculties effective September 1, was asked to assume his new duties immediately.

"Our most important task now is to find a new president," stated Newell W. Ellison, Chairman of the University's Board of Trustees. "In the meantime, we intend to move ahead in the direction established by Thomas Carroll, to strengthen every aspect of our teaching and research programs. We will continue to explore new areas of learning and to build upon the standards of excellence for which he worked so diligently."

Other new appointments have recently been announced in the offices of the President and Dean of Faculties. The appointment of Harold Bright, Professor of Statistics, as Associate Dean of Faculties, had been announced previously.

Gould Named Assistant Vice President

Mr. Gould, who is in charge of the development of the University's resources through varied programs of annual support, served as the University's Director of Alumni Relations from 1954 to 1957. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from George Washington in 1951, and his Master of Arts degree in 1955. He was Managing Editor of the Board of Trade News, official monthly publication of the Washington Board of Trade, from 1951 to 1954. At Lehigh, as Associate Director and later Director of Development, he was responsible for the Annual Giving Program, which received national excellence awards from the American Alumni Council and the U. S. Steel Foundation.

University Magazine Receives Plaudits

"The alumni and friends of the George Washington University can henceforth expect a quarterly treat in the shape of GW: The George Washington University Magazine. Volume one, number one, appropriately devoted to the American Presidency, contains a number of sprightly articles which are adorned by handsome illustrations and elegant typography. Margaret Davis, the editor, promises that future issues will be devoted to "subjects as disparate as aspirin and Elizabethan ethics." In view of the high standards already established, we are sure that they will be avidly read and greatly appreciated."

—The Washington Post, May 24, 1964

"The articles themselves turn out to be brief—probably too brief to carry much intellectual weight. As a result, they are not only essentially popular—which they should be—but somewhat lighter than much of the material in the leading circulation magazines. And this, surely, they should not be.

"There is no reason why 'GW' should not make rapid progress. The first issue of a magazine is bound to be surrounded by all manner of difficulties. These disappear as time goes by. 'GW' should soon become a worthy companion to magazines like those issued by Princeton and the Johns Hopkins University."

—Donald Mintz, "Books for Today"
The Evening Star, July 1, 1964

Two and A Half Years Later, the report issued by Newell W. Ellison, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, on the first two and a half years of President Carroll's administration, received a Certificate of Special Merit in the National Honors Competition of the American College Public Relations Association in July.

The Congressional Record of July 29 records a tribute to the late President of the University, Thomas H. Carroll, by Speaker of the House John W. McCormack. "President Carroll, by his able administrative leadership and his high academic standards, leaves a legacy that long should challenge the George Washington University which he served so brilliantly and so willingly," said the Speaker.

in the curriculum of the University and recommended the merger of the Junior College with Columbian College of Arts and Sciences. He gave increased emphasis to international affairs and established an Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies. He inaugurated a music program and provided new teaching facilities for the fine arts. The faculty and administrative personnel of the University were strengthened with the appointment of new scholars and educational leaders of proven ability.

"Under President Carroll's leadership the enrollment at the University increased substantially; the budget in support of the faculty and for the improvement of teaching facilities was greatly enlarged; and the student residence hall capacity was increased dramatically by 320 per cent.

"Few men have passed our way that have made such a profound mark for good as has Thomas Henry Carroll. We have lost a strong leader, a loyal friend, and a superior citizen. He was a noble man, and those who were touched by his influence were ennobled by him. We shall cherish his memory and we mourn his loss.

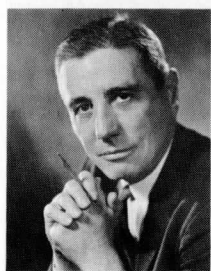

"NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that these words of appreciation of Thomas Henry Carroll become a part of the minutes of the Board of Trustees of The George Washington University as its acknowledgment of his great service to the University, to the community, and to the cause of higher education.

"FURTHER BE IT RESOLVED, that a copy of the same be carried to his family so that they may be reminded of the high esteem in which Thomas Henry Carroll was held by all of his associates at The George Washington University."

W., Washington, D. C. 20006.

Funds contributed will be used to bring to the campus each year an outstanding Shakespearean scholar, for a public lecture and for informal meetings with students. Professor John P. Reesing, Jr., is serving as Chairman of the Tupper Memorial Lecture Committee.

Wealth Inventory Planning Study Report

A plan for collecting the data required to provide estimates of the wealth of the United States was released recently in a report, Guidelines for the Improvement of Wealth and Data Estimates, by the University's Wealth Inventory Planning Study, directed by Professor John W. Kendrick, under a grant from the Ford Foundation.

The nation's wealth is variously estimated at between 2 and 3 trillion dollars, but the data on which the estimates are based are fragmentary and often unreliable.

The report outlines a plan for collecting the information needed to make estimates of our national wealth by major sectors of ownership and use, and geographic area.

The 1964 Home Football Schedule is the most attractive offered GW fans in many years. Director of Athletics Bob Faris has made every effort to bring name opponents into Washington for the home fans.

Equally attractive are the prospects of watching an exciting GW football team this fall. Coach Jim Camp feels the team is greatly improved this year and capable of a winning season despite the strong schedule.

With 25 men moving up from last year's undefeated freshman squad and 17 lettermen and several non-lettermen returning, the 46-man squad will be larger, numerically, will have better individual size, and include more overall talent than any team to represent GW in several years.

and Norman Neversen, the Colonials are again sure to have an exciting offense. An even greater improvement in the defense should enhance the Colonials' chances.

While Coach Camp has provided an exciting team, Director of Athletics Bob Faris, in addition to the attractive schedule, has arranged several special ticket programs for the alumni.

The opening game with Furman has been designated "Family Night," and any alumnus, with his purchase of a regular $3.00 ticket, may purchase up to five tickets at only 50 cents each for members of his immediate family. Thus a family of six may attend the game for only $5.50. Alumni may also purchase regular $3.00 reserved seats for only $2.00 for the Vanderbilt game and the Homecoming game with Villanova.
